If it is appropriate an ambulance response will be dispatched immediately, but you will be asked to stay on the phone so that the ambulance call-taker can give you medical advice on how best to help the patient. This will not delay the ambulance response.

There are a number of ways you can help the ambulance responder or crew before they arrive:

- Stay with the patient until the ambulance or rapid response vehicle arrives. Call back if their condition or location changes
- If you are not near the access road, get someone to wait by the road and signal where the response is required
- If you can, write down the patient's GP's details and collect any medication they may need
- Remember to stay calm - ambulance crews are there to help and violence towards them will not be tolerated.

A traditional ambulance may not be the first vehicle to arrive on scene. It could be:

- A Community First Responder
- A single crewed response vehicle with an emergency care practitioner, paramedic or emergency medical technician
- An air ambulance
- An emergency doctor
